ADMINISTRATIVE-TERRITORIAL DIVISIONS OF THE REPUBLICS OF YUGOSLAVIA

[The following report is one of several taken from Informativni prirucnik o Jugoslaviji, a handbook published irregularly since late 1948 by the Yugoslav Directorate for Information.]

The following administrative-territorial divisions, based on the Law on the Administrative and Territorial Division of the People's Republics, include all subsequent changes and amendments published in official publications as follows: for Serbia up to 11 June, for Croatia up to 8 June, for Slovenia up to 24 May, for Bosnia-Hercegovina up to 9 June, for Macedonia up to 3 June, and for Montenegro up to 20 May 1949.

* * *

Yugoslavia is composed of six people's republics: Serbia, Croatia, Slovenia, Bosnia-Hercegovina, Macedonia, and Montenegro. Yugoslavia has two autonomous units: the Autonomous Province of the Vojvodina and the Autonomous Oblast of Kosovo-Metohija.

The republics are divided into 21 oblasts, 343 srezes, 89 cities, 7,926 figures given below by republics add to 7,930 localities (villages, workers' settlements, small towns, market places, and the like), 37 city wards (reons), and 49 suburbs. [See appended map of administrative-territorial divisions.]

Serbia

Serbia is divided into two autonomous units (the Autonomous Province of the Vojvodina and the Autonomous Oblast of Kosovo-Metohija), five oblasts, 122 srezes, 35 cities [only 34 are listed below], 2,579 localities, 14 city wards, and 28 suburbs.

The autonomous units and oblasts in Serbia are as follows: (the figures in parentheses indicate the number of local people's councils in the srez concerned):
